NATURE OF WELLES' MESSAGE SECRET; IS BUSY WITH REPORTS

Scheduled to Leave Rome at Midnight For Trip To Germany

RECEIVES VISITORS

Taylor, Roosevelt's Personal "Peace Envoy" to Pope, Reaches Vatican

By Percy Winner

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ROME, Feb. 27—(INS)—While keen speculation swept diplomatic circles in Rome as to the nature of the message he handed Premier Mussolini, American Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles worked quietly at the United States embassy today.

Aided by secretaries and members of his entourage, Welles kept busy drawing up reports of his talks yesterday with Il Duce and Italian foreign minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

He also received a number of visitors, including the Brazilian ambassador to Rome.

Welles is scheduled to leave Rome about midnight tonight for Germany, presumably via Switzerland.

Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal "peace envoy" to Pope Pius XII, arrived at the Vatican shortly before 10:30 a. m. for an audience with the Pontiff, during which Taylor is expected to hand the Pope a letter from the American President.

The ceremony will be kept relatively informal and there will be no formal exchange of diplomatic speeches.

Great interest was attached to the "autographed message" which Welles handed to Premier Mussolini when they met late yesterday. The fact that no official source has given the slightest hint of what the message was has increased the conviction among diplomats in Rome that the message bore on the question of European peace.

The secrecy that has surrounded Welles' mission since his arrival on an ostensible fact-finding mission for President Roosevelt has had the effect of increasing interest in and magnifying the effect of every move he has made.

All the information given out about Welles' visit so far has stressed the cordiality of his conversations with Mussolini and Count Ciano. The communique regarding his talk with Il Duce merely said:

"Premier Mussolini received Mr. Welles in the presence of Count Ciano and Ambassador Phillips (the American envoy). Mr. Welles delivered an autographed message from President Roosevelt. The conversation, which was very cordial, lasted one hour."

No explanation of the reason for Welles' plans to go to Berlin via Switzerland, probably stopping at Bern, was forthcoming from official quarters.

But the newspaper Popolo di Roma, in a dispatch from Bern, predicted that Welles' conversations in Rome would result in improvement of American trade relations with Italy and other neutral nations.

The dispatch added that in view of the great American investments in Finland's industries and mines and Italy's consistent and vigorous pro-Finnish attitude, it is expected that Welles' activities will create a favorable atmosphere in the American Congress for removal of restrictions on Italy-American trade.

HONORED AT DINNER

NEWPORTVILLE, Feb. 27—Mrs. William Enoch, Frankford, gave a birthday dinner on Sunday in honor of her mother, Mrs. Ingraham. Those attending: Mr. and Mrs. Warren Winder and daughters, Doris and Phyllis, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Perente, Mr. and Mrs. Ingraham and children Ruth, Barbara and Jacqueline and Clifford, Jr. Mrs. Ingraham received many nice gifts.

Highway Deaths Show Increase of Ten Per Cent

HARRISBURG, Feb. 27—(INS)—Pennsylvania Highway deaths jumped 10 per cent during January, 1940, over the same period for 1939, it was disclosed today by Col. Lynn G. Adams, Motor Police Commissioner.

The death toll score: January, 1940—144; January, 1939—129.

Adams indicated, however, that compared to 1937 and 1938 this was an "improved condition." Seventy-six of the deaths this year (or 53 per cent of the total) occurred in urban areas where the motor police had no actual supervision, he added.

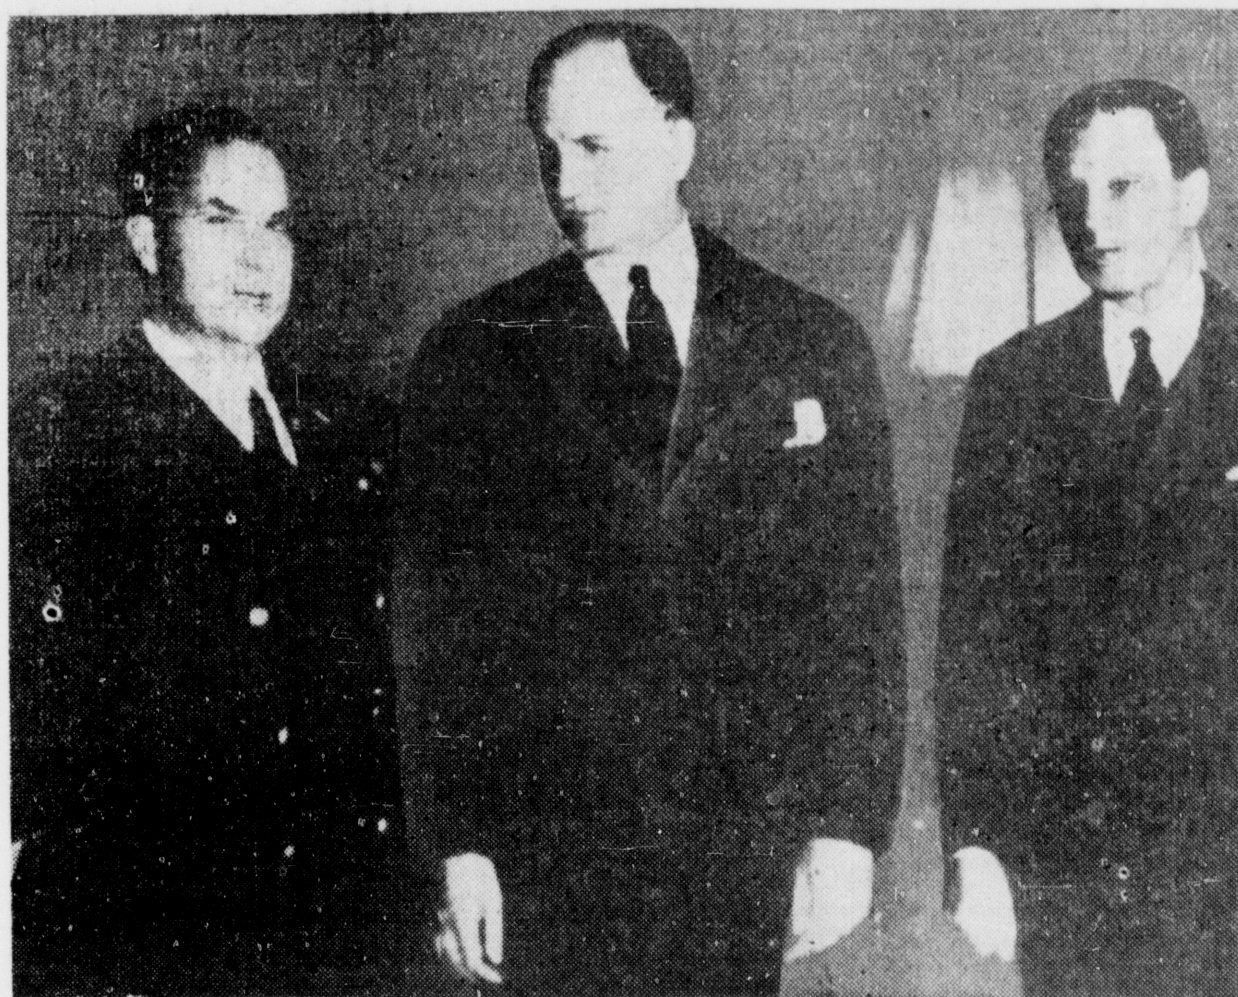

Philadelphia county had 27 auto fatalities and Allegheny County had 21. Eighteen counties reported no deaths at all.

RADIOPHOTO OF WELLES AND CIANO IN ROME

MANY FAVOR NAMING OF ZONING COMMISSION

Numerous Letters Have Been Received by Bucks County Commissioners

PLAN FUTURE GROWTH

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 27—Sentiment favorable to the appointment of a Planning and Zoning Commission for Bucks County appears to be crystallizing. Twenty-eight individuals and 14 organizations have made their opinions known to the Bucks County Commissioners. Letters have been written and all who have thus informed the Commissioners have favored the naming of such a commission for the county.

The Commission, if named, will make a study of and plan for the future growth of the county, taking advantage of the new law making planning and zoning possible.

Bucks county organizations, which have filed letters, include the following:

Phillips Mill Community Association, of New Hope; Buckingham Farmers' Club, Bucks County League of

Frank T. Soby Dies In California; Ill 6 Months

Frank T. Soby, a former resident of Hulmeville, died in Colma, California, on Saturday. Word has been received by relatives in this section that the body is being forwarded to Bucks County for burial.

The deceased, who made his home in California for more than 25 years, is the son of Annie and the late George Soby, Sr. His mother resides in Edgely. He also leaves his wife, Mrs. Anna Soby, and a daughter, Mrs. Arthur Weed, of Colma, Cal.; three sisters, Mrs. John Abrams, Edgely; Mrs. Charles Kofke, Pennington, N. J.; Mrs. Ferdinand Bachofer, Tullytown; and three brothers, George and William, of California; and Walter, of Hulmeville.

The late Mr. Soby, who had been ill for six months, was a member of a Masonic lodge in California. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Thanks For The Suggestion

Dear Stroller: Life is again rosy for me—thanks to one of your suggestions! Maybe you didn't know you made a suggestion, but it came through your column, when you told how a Bristol man, fond of smoked bloaters, cooked them on a wire carpet-beater in the furnace of his home.

That gave me an inspiration—and even though it gets my wife's "goat," she can't say anything about it. You see, it's this way: For years I had to beg her to cook bloaters for me, but there was always the same answer—there made a "smell" in the house. Now, even though I am the boss in my own home, I just don't like smells, so I did without the bloaters.

Then one day my eyes lighted on the "Stroller" column and I read how one man was keeping his wife happy, and at the same time enjoying his fish.

Now I do the same. I just want to show him that his idea is helping a companion-in-distress.

Sincerely,

A LOVER OF BLOATERS.

Soviets Prepare To Advance

Helsinki, Feb. 27—Now in possession of the strategic Kolisto fort, Soviet forces hammering toward Viborg, prepared today for an advance across the ice of Viborg Bay in an attempt to reach the mainland and outflank hard-pressed Finnish positions. Military information received in Helsinki indicated that the Finns had made all preparations to repel any such attack. The crossing of the ice from the Kolisto Islands, to the mainland, is held to be a comparatively easy undertaking, but observers believe that its mere simplicity may change the effect of placing thousands of Russian troops at the mercy of Finnish mainland guns.

Communities west of Viborg were evacuating all civilians in the belief this area will be the next big battle ground. Finnish coast defenses all along the bay were strengthened. At Kolisto, forts were abandoned over Saturday and Sunday. All guns not capable of moving transposition were destroyed. Those which could be dismantled were carried on skis across the ice.

Disaster almost overtook the hundreds of Finns comprising the "suicide army" which for weeks held Kolisto against the invaders. When close to the mainland, the ice suddenly parted, but a sudden sea current carried the ice floe together, and the Finns were able to proceed to safety. It was emphasized in Helsinki that loss of the Kolisto fort was comparatively unimportant.

"They did more than was expected of them at best," a spokesman said.

Three Leap From Fire

Philadelphia, Feb. 27—A 57 year old father was critically injured today and his two sons were hurt when they leaped to the street from a second story window of their burning home in West Philadelphia. The victims, all badly burned, are Abraham Apt and his sons, Edward, 27, and Stanley, 17. The eldest Apt suffered a broken arm and other injuries, while Stanley had a possible leg fracture. All three were trapped in the second floor by flames which started in a furniture shop operated by the sons on the ground floor.

FORMER PARKLAND WOMAN ENDS LIFE AT HOME OF FRIEND

Mrs. Jacob Aschenbrand Succumbs to Gas in Philadelphia

FUNERAL PRIVATE

Note Read: "My Last Words Are, I Love You Hutch. I Mean You. 7:58"

A woman who resided in Parkland for many years ended her life by gas in Philadelphia, yesterday morning.

The victim of the act is Mrs. Beatrice Aschenbrand, 48, widow of Jacob Aschenbrand.

Mrs. Aschenbrand, the mother of two children, left a note addressed to Charles Hutchinson, in whose home she ended her life. The note read: "My last words are, I love you, Hutch. I mean you. 7:58."

To her daughter, a nurse in Abington Hospital, and to her son, who resides in Langhorne, Mrs. Aschenbrand's last message in a note was: "I am tired and broken-hearted." The daughter is Miss June Aschenbrand, and the son, Roy Aschenbrand. In addition the deceased leaves a brother, Edward Griffith, Philadelphia.

The body was discovered some time after Mrs. Aschenbrand ended her life, in the home of Hutchinson, Bamberg street, near Clearfield, Philadelphia. She had made her home in that city for the past year, working as a waitress in the Masonic Home, Broad street and Ontario avenue. She was the daughter of the late Thomas and Mary Griffith.

The funeral service will be private, this afternoon at 1:30, at the R. L. Horner funeral home, Langhorne. The Rev. John P. Cranston, Jr., pastor of Parkland Community Church, will officiate, and cremation will take place at Ewing Crematory, Ewing, N. J.

SEEKS NOMINATION

HON. THOMAS B. STOCKHAM

STOCKHAM TO SEEK RETURN TO OFFICE

Morrisville Man To Be Candidate For Re-election to State Legislature

IS WIDELY KNOWN

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 27—Announcing that he will again seek the office of assemblyman, the Hon. Thomas B. Stockham, has publicly stated that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination to succeed himself as a member of the State Legislature from Bucks County.

Mr. Stockham has been one of the most useful members of the Pennsylvania Legislature.

He has been in public life since he was 22 years of age and one of the most widely known Bucks Countians because of his long activity in a great variety of matters of community and county interest.

He is a native of Morrisville and a graduate of Drexel Institute as an engineer. For a time he served with the Pennsylvania Railroad, but later established a business as a builder and a dealer in coal and lumber and building supplies. Later he went into the real estate and insurance business.

For sixteen years he was Burgess of Morrisville. For three terms he has been in the Legislature and has been the Republican whip during the present term and chairman of the utilities committee. He is also on the Governor's Board for Interstate Relations. He has also been honored by being elected president of the Bucks County School Directors' Association.

In civic affairs he has served as president of the Chamber of Commerce, both county and local, of the Bucks-Montgomery Counties Press League, the Boy Scouts Council, and now the Bucks County Real Estate Board. He is now vice president of the Morrisville Bank, the Bucks County Firemen's Association and the Atlantic Deeper Waterway Association.

He is also Regional Commodore of Region III of the Boy Scouts of America, warden of his home town Episcopal church and a member of the Diocesan Council.

Assemblyman Stockham's lengthy record of public service is widely known, as well as his conscientious and able work for his constituents while a Member of the Legislature.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Chance For Gun Spiking

Washington, Feb. 26. IF there were really intelligent Democratic leadership in Congress the Republican party could be left so completely without an issue in the coming campaign as to be ridiculous. Certainly, the opportunity of reducing it to impotence has been given in the Glenn Frank report recently presented to the Republican National Committee.

THIS is so not because the report is bad but because it is good. It is, in fact, so good that it is quite clear that the Republican platform to be adopted at its June convention will be molded along its lines. Its suggestions are generally recognized as sound and have been widely commended by the press. What the Frank program urges in the way of labor legislation, agriculture, relief, social security and economy represents just about what most Democrats in Congress would like to do if they could.

THE reason they have not is because the weight of the White House has been against any move in that direction. For example, to revamp the Wagner Act and substitute for the present Labor Relations Board one which would insure administration by men of demonstrated capacity and impartiality is so plainly desirable that there seems no excuse whatever for failure to do so. Yet, despite the shocking revelations of the Smith committee, there is no Administration plan for correcting either the flaws in the law or the flaws in the board.

THE attitude of Mr. Roosevelt in this, as in other matters, is that New Deal laws and New Deal

STATE INVESTIGATOR TAKES THE STAND AT GREENBERG TRIAL

Private Felix R. Gowan, State Motor Police, Tells of His Investigation

QUIZZED GREENBERG

Unable to Find the Money or Clothing Which Owner Says Was in The Building

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 27—The fourth day of the trial of Adam Greenberg, 52-year-old farmer and proprietor of the Black Cat Inn dance hall and beer parlor that was partially destroyed by fire in October, 1938, started yesterday in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Bucks county before a jury and Judge Calvin S. Boyer.

This is Greenberg's second trial. He was convicted last year but a new trial was granted by Judge Boyer. He is charged with arson, in connection with the fire at the Black Cat located near Plumsteadville on the Lackawanna Trail.

The Commonwealth's star witness, Private Felix R. Gowan, of the Doylestown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police, took the stand yesterday afternoon. He is the prosecutor named in the bill of indictment.

As a member of the Motor Police for 14 years, Private Gowan was called by District Attorney Edward G. Biester. Gowan testified that he inspected the entire building on the morning of the fire. His testimony in part was as follows:

"I went to the bath room on the second floor and found in the center of that room near the bath tub, a broken milk bottle surrounded with paper and rags. There were rags hanging on the bath tub too. An ice cream container was found near the commode, partly burned. The ice cream container had a strong odor of oil or gasoline and there was still a half-inch of liquid in the jar which smelled the same way.

"Then I went to a bed room east of the bath and found two windows burned out. Paint on the door was blistered and walls and ceiling were covered with soot.

"Then I went to another bed room on the southeast side of the building where Greenberg said he slept the night of the fire. Under one window was a large paper carton containing newspapers, victrola record and other miscellaneous items. The box and contents were saturated with some mixture of something that smelled like gasoline or kerosene. The box was so wet we could not lift it at the time without the bottom falling out. There was an iron bed in the room covered with a straw mattress, the cover of which had been burned off. There was a strong odor of gasoline or kerosene in the middle of the mattress. In a closet of the bed room I found a small cardboard box containing rags and papers and the contents smelled plainly of an odor of gas or kerosene. In an unfinished attic I found paint cans and a peanut jar that smelled of gas or kerosene, and it was approximately one-half full.

"In the dance floor downstairs I found five quart jars all of which had gasoline or kerosene in them at one time. In the basement and on top of the concrete foundation there were jars and cans containing a liquid which smelled the same. In a nearby shelf there were other jars that smelled of gasoline or kerosene.

"There was very little fire in the pipeless heater except for a few corn-cobs burning but there were two jars in the furnace and one had in it either gasoline or kerosene."

Private Gowan then testified as to measurements that he took on the second floor indicating that the Commonwealth will contend as they did in the first trial, that there were seven or eight separate or distinct fires at the Black Cat Inn. The defense theory is that the fire was all one blaze.

"On the way to Doylestown from the scene of the fire," Private Gowan continued, "Greenberg told me that he occasionally slept at the Black Cat Inn and that he did the night of October 6th. He told me that he was aroused by the smoke and heat and ran downstairs where the flames were coming out of the kitchen door.

"I asked Greenberg where he got the clothing that he was wearing at the time he was on his way to Doylestown. He told me that he always undressed in the kitchen at night because it was cold upstairs and that he came down in his night clothes

THE MILK BOTTLE

It's only a broken milk bottle; never mind, the creamery furnishes them. How many articles in common use, like the milk bottle, are counted as costing nothing? The American people are the greatest wasters in the world.

Now consider this despised milk bottle. The bureau of dairy industry of the United States Department of Agriculture has been watching the milk bottles. And it recently gave out some figures that prove the annual loss from broken or misplaced bottles totals close to $3,000,000. That is what milk bottle carelessness costs.

Who pays it? Somebody has to stand that loss. The bottles cost a little more than a nickel apiece. The manufacturers get their price for the bottles. Probably the farmers who sell the milk get a little less for their product. The bottles have to be paid for and something over 800,000,000 of them will be broken or lost in the course of this year.

And the part of the $3,000,000 loss that can not be charged back to the farmer must be paid by the consumer. Somebody has to pay the losses of a going concern. There is no profit in waste.

SO SWINGS THE CIRCLE

From now on women are going to be women. "The new fashions are divinely alluring, feminine and elegantly modest," says the editor of a popular woman's magazine in a broadcast from Paris, as she discusses the Paris openings of 1940.

Mrs. Carmel Snow says: "I feel that modesty has a new sex appeal. I found emphasized, too, that it is not the fashion any longer to be dramatic in your dressing. Impertinent chic that was so chic is now as dead as the dodo. I notice a new coquetry in French women. They are dressing for one man, not for many. It's the new and interesting sophistication."

It is impossible to go into detail about the alluring blouses, the silhouettes, Molyneux for day and Schiaparelli for evening, the hips that melt away by day and the curves under candlelight, the "exciting colors" and all the other tricks of style, the halo hats and the rest of the frippery.

But if the style magnates will make women to be again "divinely alluring, feminine and elegantly modest," mere man shall be deeply indebted and deeply grateful, and as worshipful as ever.

POWER OF PERSUASION

One of the most essential elements in success is the ability to talk and write in a persuasive way. A man may be a wonder in the work he does and the service he renders. But if he is not able to convince people of the merits of his work and the goods he sells, he may not attain much success.

Nor is it necessary that a person be an eloquent talker or a gifted writer to gain this power. The facts comprise the thing that has the most persuasive force. If a merchant has an article which usually sells for a dollar, but which for some special reason he is willing to sell for seventy-five cents, this fact has all the persuasive power imaginable.

All he has to do is to state it in a newspaper advertisement, and add a few words telling why and how he has decided to make this offer. Such facts count more in any business message than eloquence.

The Great Game of Politics

boards must not be changed except as suggested by himself. Disclosures that the acts are faulty and the administrative agencies inefficient and biased are taken as personal reflections upon him, and any effort to amend or change is resisted. Those who propose such things are regarded as either ignorant or unworthily inspired, or both. The idea with which the President seems imbued is that to agree to amend or change any New Deal law or board either means admitting a mistake or retreating from a policy. Both are abhorrent to his nature. In seven years he has not been able to bring himself to admit a single error, however glaring, or abandon one policy no matter how completely flopped.

HIS refusal to concede that the NLRB has made a record of unfairness, incompetency and actual lawlessness unique in the history of governmental boards is typical of his attitude toward Federal relief, toward economy, toward agriculture, toward fiscal policy, toward business regulation, toward all other New Deal activities. The President's position is that, without exception, everything he has initiated is right and is working well. So long as he thus stands, Congress, though knowing that neither of these things is true, has been unable to move in a corrective direction.

NOW, the Frank report, without urging drastic reversal of New Deal policies, does make a strong indictment of its mistakes and failures, does point out the dangers of refusing to recognize them, does make concrete proposals to amend and change. Not one of these is offensive to the majority in Congress. All of them have previously been urged by Democrats. Practically every one could be acted upon between now and the middle of June, when the session ends. The Democrats still have a very large majority in the House and even larger, proportionately, in the Senate. And they have nearly three months in which to act.

BY adopting the Frank suggestions as to the Wagner Act and the NLRB they could remove from the campaign a very real issue and deprive the Republicans of a very effective point of attack. By recognizing that the present method of relief is wasteful and inefficient, and naming a commission to study the facts and recommend a better system at the next session, they could cover up another very vulnerable spot. By further slashes in appropriations they could blunt the force of the attack upon the wild New Deal expenditures and demonstrate that the Democratic party has turned toward a balanced budget. And by resolution of Congress, they could discourage not. And the reason they will not is because they will get no help from the President.

Planning GOP Convention

ON the contrary, the Roosevelt weight will be dead against any move which suggests that he has not devised the perfect system of relief. He will resist—in fact, is now resisting—all efforts to cut appropriations and will oppose any amendment to the Labor Act not sponsored by its author, Senator Wagner. So, too, will he oppose any real move toward budget balancing, toward curbing the regulatory commissions he has set up, or checking the young radicals, hot to discredit the capitalistic system. Of course, Congress cannot very well do any of these things without him. And so they won't be done. But it is a pity to lose the chance. No party has ever had quite so good a one to spike the guns of the opposition.

"SELF MADE GIRL" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXXVI

With every day Linda drew new strength, new vitality. Her color began to come back, the deep circles under her eyes faded, her step grew lighter, her laughter more effortless. Nearly every evening Glenn drove over.

"Looks as though he were trying to revive the old affair," Constance said. "That's the way with those widows. First they're getting you to sympathize with them, then they're asking you to take care of their half-orphaned children."

Linda smiled. "I don't think poor Glenn is guilty, but anyway I wouldn't be very susceptible. My sister, Claudine, married a widower, you know. I wouldn't find the idea of being a stepmother very alluring."

"My goodness," Constance said, "I was only teasing! I know you're engaged to Ned Hilliard!"

Another week passed, and outspoken Constance could keep silent no longer.

"Linda, don't be angry. But I'm worried. I don't care about Glenn McAllister particularly, except that he's one of the people we used to know years ago, and that gives me a soft spot for him. But I hate to see anyone hurt, and he's going to be terribly hurt unless you stop this now—before it's too late."

"Stop what?"
"Oh, Linda! Don't you credit anyone else with feelings? He's here ALL the time, and he'll be terribly hurt when he finds you're engaged to someone else."

"I don't see why."

"Because everyone else can see it if you can't—and maybe he can't. But it's plain that he's building on you, Linda. You're his second chance, his hope of coming out of grief into sunshine again."

"I'm not going to be anyone's sunshine. Besides, people don't get second chances. I only wish they did."

"Linda, you frighten me when you're in that mood. What's the MATTER with you these days? Everyone isn't as self-sufficient as you are!"

"I'm not self-sufficient."

"You are! You're independent as a shooting star. And you don't realize how it hurts those who love you. I can't understand why you don't write Ned. Think how he feels waiting—waiting for letters that never come."

"Maybe you think I don't know what THAT is. I spent five years of my life waiting for letters. Hanging over the post-box, hoping, praying, crying, throwing my youth away—waiting—"

"Linda! It wasn't. . . It wasn't Glenn!"

"Oh, yes, it was. Right up to the moment that he married Ruth. I know I didn't have the right to hope, and I don't blame him. But that didn't help me much. I didn't want to live after that, and before I was through I made such a mess of my life that it would have been just as well if I hadn't lived. Oh, don't talk to me about caring. Caring! I've cared enough to last a lifetime. Oh, you don't understand—you COULDN'T understand—I've been such a fool—such a fool—"

Connie's elfin face was all puckered with worry. "You! Why I think you're wonderful, Linda. Look at all you've accomplished!"

"Yes! Wonderful is the word,

That's what I used to think, I guess. I thought I knew all the answers. I thought I could make my own life, and manage my own love affairs—and the mess I made of it—the awful, tragic mess!"

"Oh, honey. It was Glenn all the time! And that perfectly sweet Ned Hilliard!"

"Oh, don't TALK about him. I can never face him again. Never! Never!"

"Well, he won't feel very happy about it. But he'll understand. He'll have to. After all if you still love Glenn, you can't marry Ned, no matter how much he wants you to. But you'll have to write him—"

"I write him twenty letters every day, and tear them up! It's so terribly hard. I'm going to have to go back and face him. It's the only fair thing. It's giving him up that kills me—and telling him—"

"Of course it's hard. But I don't see—"

Linda began to cry, brokenly.

"That's it. You don't see. You never could understand—nobody could. I FEEL! I spent my whole life, thinking I was in love with Glenn McAllister, and I couldn't wait to get here to see him again. And that first night I knew—I knew that Glenn—the real Glenn was no more the man I was in love with than the man in the moon. He was just my invention. I made him up! I thought he was Glenn—but he WASN'T! And that kept me from really loving Ned—I mean it kept me from KNOWING I loved him—until it was too late. Oh, now do you see? Do you understand? Look what I've done! Look what I've done to NED!"

"But darling child—it's all right. He doesn't have to know that. All he has to know is that you love him, and that everything's all right again. And you can be happy again—"

"Happy? Me! What right have I to be happy? Connie, you don't know. You'll loathe me, too. Every one will, but not as much as I loathe myself. I thought I was so smart. I thought—"

"Linda, truly I don't see what you're crying about!"

Linda lifted her washed face. All her prettiness was ravaged away. She looked ill, and old and tortured.

"You may as well know the rest. Ned Hilliard doesn't know me—the real me. He loves me the way I loved Glenn. He thinks I'm something I'm not. But this is my fault, not his. I've lied to him every minute since I've known him. He thinks I'm—oh, Connie!—if you knew how I feel! He thinks—I made him think—that—that my family is like yours—that they're important people. That they always had money—"

Connie's jaw dropped. She stared. "Why—a—a—Why, I don't think he does, any such thing. I know he thinks you're wonderful because you've accomplished so much all alone."

"No—no, he doesn't. But he's going to know. And that isn't all. This is the worst part. Remember Lawrence? Well, he got very down and out, and came to San Francisco, with his wife and baby and they came to my apartment and I—kept Ned away. I was ashamed of them. I lied about them and—"

"Honey, you didn't! You couldn't have!"

"Oh, yes, I did. It's hard to believe. But I did."

Connie began to laugh, weakly.

"But Linda, Ned told me about them! I—I happened to say that—well, something about your supporting your family all those years, and educating yourself and—Oh, don't look at me that way! I didn't know I wasn't supposed to tell! I did think you were wonderful, and he did, too. He said so. And then he told me about meeting your brother when he first arrived, and he was trying to get the doorman to let him in. You weren't home, or something and Ned was coming to call and heard it all, and he said he thought it was funny you never mentioned it—but he did think you were wonderful!"

"He must have," Linda said through the tears she couldn't control. "Lying about my own brother—"

"Linda, please don't cry so. You'll be ill!"

"I wish I'd die. But if I ever tell another lie—if I ever pretend again—"

"Don't be so tragic about it! Everyone does silly things. Goodness—it's nothing."

"Nothing that I've thrown away the only real love I ever had? Well, it's something to me. It's EVERYTHING—"

"You haven't thrown anything away. He still loves you. If he doesn't, why does he wire or telephone every day asking about you?"

"He doesn't!"

"He hasn't missed a day yet. Ask Harry!—And he wants to know when he can come out and marry you. He wants to have the wedding in May. I told him you'd be well enough by then and we'd have an outdoor wedding, and he's counting on it. I told the gardener, too, and Father and Harry."

Linda wiped her eyes. "Evidently you told everyone but the bride. Well, it was nice of you both, and don't mind me if I go on crying for a while. I'm just weeping for my lost happiness. But don't you think I'm beaten! I don't expect Ned to want me now, because how can I? Look what a low-down cheat I've been. But I'm going back and face the music. I'm going to be an honest, decent person if it kills me. I'm going back and work and be a real success. It's just too bad that I didn't know what was worth having, and what wasn't, a little earlier—before I wrecked my life—"

"You haven't wrecked it. I've TOLD you what Ned said!"

"And I told you I didn't believe it." Still groping for her handkerchief Linda made her way upstairs, to finish her cry alone. At the landing she called back to Constance, "Please forgive me. You're too sweet to me. I—I can't tell you—or I'll cry again—"

And as she stood on the landing she noticed the white climbing roses, beginning to bud, outside the hall window. They'd be all abloom in May. One could have a beautiful wedding, here in this lovely old house. Not that she believed a word of what Connie told her, of course. Love, for her, was gone. Only work was ahead. . . . work and the kind of success that was no longer enough. . . .

And downstairs in the living room Constance was scribbling a telegram. It was addressed to Ned Hilliard in San Francisco and it was just one word—

"Come!"

FINAL SCORE IS 30 TO 28

Soap Makers Lead During
Most of The Second Half

After losing three straight, the Grundy team snapped out of its doldrums in the last minute of play and nosed out the Manhattan Soap Company five, 30-28. The victory assures the Grundy men of at least a tie for first place, the result depending on the outcome of Thursday night's game.

Manhattan had the lead during most of the second half of the game and lost out in the closing minute of the game when with a four point lead, Nowalinski was fouled and he sunk in both shots to cut the lead. Billy Gallagher deadlocked the count with a wild shot from side court.

The playing was now fast and both clubs were struggling to get possession of the ball. Manhattan had it but lost in an interception. Vanant passed to Bucky Buckman and the latter with a one-handed shot scored what proved to be the winning points. Joe Snyder and Gallagher both missed tries for Manhattan in the last ten seconds of the game.

Twice during the game Joe Gallagher came through with long shots to deadlock the score. He made four field goals during the night and with Moose Mulligan was the outstanding player of the night. Nowalinski scored ten points to lead the winners' scoring attack.

BRISTOL BASKETBALL LEAGUE

The Bristol Basketball League's record for scoring the most points in a game and also the individual team scoring record, were both shattered last night as the Profy team won out over the Falls Alumni five by the amazing score of 71-63.

The 71 total represents the highest number of points any team scored in a single contest while the 124 points scored by both clubs is another record which may stand on the books for some time to come.

Of the sixteen players who saw action, each scored at least two points. Even "Pete" Bornice who heretofore had only been scoring on an average of two points per game came through and ripped the cords for nine points.

Charlie Hughes made 21 points while the Falls' leaders were Duerr and Briggie who had a dozen each.

BENSALEM WRESTLERS EASILY THROW BRISTOL

The strong Bensalem Owl wrestlers proved their superiority over the inexperienced Bristol High grapplers when they pinned them for the second time this season, winning here yesterday afternoon by a 34-3 count.

Paradoxical as it seems, though, Bristol exhibited a much stronger team than that which stacked up against the Owls in their last meeting at which time the Owls won, 32½ to 6½. While the final score of the meet would not so much as hint at that fact, yet in nearly every match the opponents of the Blue and Grey matmen were forced more in this meet to gain the decision than they were in their last engagement.

On the other hand, the boys of coach George Reimer chalked up the same number of victories via a fall in this meet than they did at Bensalem. In both meets five Cardinal grapplers went down by the fall route. Then, too, Bristol scored at least one triumph in the last meet. But yesterday they couldn't even gain any victories at all.

Summary of the meet:
95 lb. class: Stan Reynolds, Bensalem, defeated Mike Hall, Bristol, on a fall in 2:12 with a half nelson and arm lock. Score: Bensalem, 5; Bristol, 0.

105 lb. class: Barney Reynolds, Bensalem, and Tony Jardine, Bristol, battled to a draw. Score: Bensalem, 6½; Bristol, 1½.

115 lb. class: Jim Shapcott, Bensalem, pinned Jack DeLong, Bristol, with a half nelson and arm lock in 2:12. Score: Bensalem, 11½; Bristol, 1½.

125 lb. class: Barney Reynolds, Bensalem, tossed Ezio Zanni, Bristol, in 1:24 of the third period with a half nelson hold. Score: Bensalem, 16½; Bristol, 1½.

135 lb. class: Bob Reynolds, Bensalem, defeated Mike Hall, Bristol, on a fall in 2:12 with a half nelson and arm lock. Score: Bensalem, 18; Bristol, 3.

145 lb. class: Charles Vansant, Bensalem, won a referee's decision over Hardy Johnson, Bristol. Score: Bensalem, 21; Bristol, 3.

155 lb. class: Roy Silcox, Bensalem, won a decision over captain John Melillo, Bristol, in two extra periods. Score: Bensalem, 24; Bristol, 3.

165 lb. class: Captain Silcox, Bensalem, threw Joe Fallon, Bristol, in 1:28 with a body press. Score: Bensalem, 29; Bristol, 3.

175 lb. class: Warren Jester, Bensalem, pinned Bud Carter, Bristol, in 1:09 of second period, with a body press. Final score: Bensalem, 34; Bristol, 3.

Referee: Gushard, Ureanus, Times: Lehr, Bensalem, Recorder, Lehr, Bensalem. Time of bouts: 5 minutes divided into 3 periods of 1-2-2 minutes.
